We have 25 members of the A-Team here for the conference. There will be a 1:1 ratio of Buddies. As of this printing a few positions have not been filled, but they will be by the time of your arrival. As you will discover, this year's conference offers A-Teamers an unparalleled opportunity to participate and contribute to important discussions on ASI's research priorities for the future. Shannon Caldwell, Brittany Foor, and Chelsey Kostick have been hard at work as your representatives on the Stakeholder Steering Committee. Seek them out if you have questions about the process.

You will also find that we have made a huge effort to enable better communication during such scheduled sessions as A-Team Only and Ask the A-Team, which take place Sunday morning. We will have a hearing loop, numerous remote microphones, lapel and table mics so that you all can better hear one another and share your thoughts and feelings. We will also maintain a "Let's Talk Tech" room where you can view and discuss the latest technology, and you are encouraged to bring any devices of your own to share with others less fortunate or if you need some expert advice or technical problem solving.

Although you will spend more time in the talks, fear not, we know how much you like to have fun together. For those on campus early enough on Thursday, we will be taking you to a specially designed Mystery Room where low vision is an asset in solving a mystery, one necessary to escape from the room! On Friday, after attending morning sessions, you will go lobstering on Cape Cod Bay and then have a private A-Team luncheon cruise aboard the Pilgrim Belle, an authentic paddle-wheeler. Saturday will be devoted to discussion of and voting on 9 different research topics of vital interest to our full global stakeholder community. On Sunday afternoon, you'll be headed back out on the water as all attendees go whale watching. Afterwards, we will move on to Edaville, USA, a family friendly amusement park where we will also have a BBQ.
